The housing market is undergoing something of a boom with the recent crash largely reversed in the past year. Coupled with the rise of Bitcoin and Ethereum, the real estate market has had to face two new financial institutions. Both Bitcoin and Ethereum are transactions systems that allow the transfer of money. They do this by allowing people to buy products (usually goods or services) by using money in electronic form, leaving the actual physical item in the possession of the buyer. Essentially, we send money to another party who can convert the value into goods or services for us. Both Bitcoin and Ethereum have experienced meteoric rise in value in the past few years, becoming two of the most valuable currencies in the world. In fact, Bitcoin is probably the most valuable currency in the world currently. As the lead currency of the peer-to-peer exchange, it currently has a value of over $365 billion. Ethereum has also experienced a similar rise, only more so. The Ethereum team, unlike the developers of Bitcoin, did not simply transfer and add value with each block, but rather created a programmable scripting language to allow programmers to build complex applications (think of it as eScripts for Blockchain). This has led to it building the second largest cryptocurrency by market capitalization, only behind Bitcoin. So, what does this mean for real estate? Let's take a look at how real estate will have to deal with these developments. First, the real estate market can in some ways view Bitcoin and Ethereum as two separate markets. Bitcoin, as the biggest currency, already has products and services to its name. For example, Bitcoin digital wallets 1cdb36666d

There were no confirmed injuries, police said. Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern said the threat level was still elevated. The mosque is located close to the site where gunman Brenton Tarrant was filmed live streaming the killings on social media. New Zealand's worst mass killing has prompted the nation to call a "time of unity and resilience", the prime minister has said. The warning was followed by the New Zealand Symphony Orchestra cancelling a concert at the city's Hagley Park. "We will not be intimidated or allow any acts of violence to disrupt this moment that we have all been waiting for, since day one," Ms Ardern said. "A new dawn has arrived in New Zealand. And I hope that it will be a dawn for many, many years to come." The prime minister also announced that the country's flag would be lowered to half-mast for a week in honour of the victims. No-one has been arrested in connection with the shootings. Minutes after the attack, a man drove a vehicle through a crowd of people at the scene and struck people with his vehicle. Six people were hurt, police said. He is reported to have published a 74-page manifesto before the attacks. New Zealand's Muslim community was targeted in the shootings. The mosque was attacked minutes after Friday prayers, which are the main weekly Muslim prayer ritual. It is located on the grounds of a large, multi-faith cemetery, which was also damaged in the attack. The Al Noor mosque released a statement saying that the
